IT'S A SNUG RETREAT

WORKHOUSE AN EASY PLACE FOR PETTY TRANSGRESSORS.

An Institution That Is Admirably Managed, Although Appropriation for Fiscal Year Is Insufficient for Needs.

The Kansas City workhouse cannot lay claim to being a model reformatory institution, but as a place wherein to detain transgressors of the law, suspected hard characters and incorrigible inchriates, it probably has no superior in the country. Just at present the 140 prisoners are taking life easy. They have warm and comfortable cells to sleep in, and twice a day whole-some food is supplied them. The cold wave is responsible for the era of enforced idleness, for the workhouse boarders are kept employed, whenever the weather permits, in breaking rock and macadamizing streets. The present admirable condition of Agnes and Allen avenues is due to workhouse labor, and there is always an ample supply of broken rock on hand for emergency and improvement work. The rock supply is mexhaustible, a mammoth quarry being one of the most valued possessions of the

Looks Like a Fortress.

The workhouse is located at Twentieth and Lydis, and is a most imposing structure. It is built of stone, and with its ture. It is built of stone, and with its tower and turrets looks like a medieval fortress, its jail appurtenances are up to date, and its fixtures of modern design. There are three departments—for adult males, females and boys. The former is the largest, and 200 prisoners can be accommodated in it without crowding. Fifty women and half as many boys can be accommodated in their respective departments.

The women prisoners are generally put The women prisoners are generally put to work in the launary, dining room and kitchen, and the expertness with which they perform the first named labor and the cleanliness of the food departments show that no matter how deeply they may have drunk of the drees of degradation, they have not forgotten the lessons of domesticity learned when their lives were full of sunshine and their futures full of hope. of sunshine and their futures full of hope, are doing penance for their misdeeds, and their recognized star is old Mury Kelly, the heroine of a hundred North end drunks, whose excuse always is that her system is so thoroughly impregnated with alcohol that she cannot pass an empty beer barrel without experiencing the delights of intoxication.

In the men's department, old John King, Mary's side partner in inebriety, is the star offender. He has served more terms in the workhouse than he has fingers and toes and, like Mary, would be contented if he was sure that he could end his days there.

A Duo of Noted Criminals. Among the noted criminals Eugene Scully and John Thomas easily lead. By the police they are considered all round crooks. police they are considered all round crooks. Scully has a Chicago record, which runs the gamut of crime from murder to common burglary. His wife, "Dutch" Annie, was also a workhouse inmate until a few weeks ago. A pardon issued by Mayor Jones opened the jail doors to her and she at once proceeded to Chicago. Immediately after her arrival she "turned a trick," was arrested and is once more "doing time" behind the bars of a Cook county tail.

The discipline of the institution is rigid, but not severe. Rules are conspicuously posted and were made to be obeyed. Every infraction is promptly met with punishment, and the result is that good order and ready obedience prevail among the prisoners. But the guards have to be vigilant at all times. Many desperate men are always confined there. In the manufacture of implements, the designing of keys and jail-breaking tools they are adepts. Jailbreaking Tools Made.

Knives as sharp as razors or with edges roughened so as to groduce a saw edge, and manufactured out of steel shoe shanks, hoop bands and from odds and ends; keys fashioned from wood that would unlock the heavy jail doors; "billies" filled with lead and peculi-receiver mans with stems of paper and ing cards, checkers and sewgaws of no utility or merit were also found and con-fiscated, as were numerous substitutes for tobacco. For smoking is no longer per-mitted.

We were forced to ruling against to-"We were forced to ruling against to-bacco," said an attache, "or give up our jobs. Fully four-fifths of the prisoners sent here are inveterate cigarette smokers and when smoking was permitted from eighty to 160 of the offensive things were going all the time. The jail was filled with smoke and the stench was something awful. So we decided to enter upon a reform era. We posted the rule banishing cigarettes and pipes, and now the atmosphere of the jail is always pure, the health of the prisoners better and the consumption of food great-er."

Wholesome Food Is Furnished.

Although the appropriation fr the present fiscal year is but $16,699, not sufficient by at least $2,690, no matter how economically the institution is managed, the food furnished the prisoners is wholesome. When working three meals a day are served. For breakfast the menu is: Bread, beef gravy and coffee; for dinner, scup, beef, potatoes and bread; for supper, beef, bread and coffee. Occasionally the breakfast consists of bread, molasses and coffee, and on Sundays baked beans and sileed pork are added to the bill of fare. In speaking of the needs of the institution an official said: "The appropriation of $16,090 is inadequate to the demands and importance of the institution. The average number of immates is about 180. They have to be fed and partially clothed and when employed it requires a number of have to be fed and partially clothed and when employed it requires a number of guards to watch them. There are four-teen men on the payroll. We cannot get along with a less number, and as a matter of fact we need more. Fuel, lights, medicines, etc., and the teams have to be cared for. Every expense item is supposed to be paid out of the appropriation of $16,000. Under the present system it cannot be done. In order to do so cheese-paring economy will have to be resorted to. Guards can be discharged, but if this were done, the prisoners could not be worked on the streets. That, however, is the only solution of the problem. We are now doing the best we can, but the end of the year will see a deficiency and it cannot be avoided."

Winter Clothing Needed.

Winter Clothing Needed. The same official called attention to the meager supply of clothing furnished the prisoners and the resultant evils from "As soon as a prisoner is received here." said he, "he is stripped and given a bath. The clothing he wore is wrapped up and placed away until he is discharged, when it is returned to him. The city supplies him with a pair of overalls, a shirt and a pair of shoes. In the summer time the outfit is all that is really needed. The overalls and shirt are washed every week and the men observe cleanliness about their persons. In the winter time conditions are different. We have no heavy clothing to give out. The result is that prisoners received during the season are permitted to retain their clothing. As most of them are infected with vermin, the jail soon befores a breeding spot and it is impossible for us to get rid of the pests. If the appropriation was larger we could supply proper winter clothing, our fall would always be clean and the prisoners saved the anneyance which they are constantly subjected to under the present conditions."

City officials who believe in encouraging good work done by subordinates should ind a well-As soon as a prisoner is received here." good work done by subordinates should visit the workhouse. They will tind a well-managed institution which is deserving of all the municipal aid the treasury is able

On November 30 a general meeting will be held and Mrs. Louis M. McCull will read an essay, 'The Evolution of Women.'

The Sorosis of Springfield, Mo., has eighty-five members—all enthusiastic workers toward the accomplishment of ideal club aims. Thirty-three of these are young girls wno infuse the life and vigor of youth into the council of the club. Saturday afternoon is the time of meeting and only once a month do all the sections meet together for conference. The departments are literature, current topics, the tourists, art history, household economics. The Woman's Reading Club of Kansas City, Mo., presents an excellent programme for the year's study. German literature is strictly adiered to, and a more scholarly programme for occasional study on this subject could hardly be found. Seven weeks are given up to the consideration of Goethe and his dramas. On Wednesday, November 39, Mrs. G. A. Parker will read a paper on "Humanism." The topics, Reuchlin, Erasmus and Ulrich von Hutton, will be given by Mrs. L. A. Ostemeyer, Mrs. James M. Richardson and Mrs. L. M. Columbus has also a Book Club of eighteen members. At the beginning of the year each member puts the name of the book of her choice on a list and the eighteen books are sent for. They are read, passed around in regular order and thus eighteen books are read for the cost of one, At the end of the season lots are drawn for the books. Hereafter, however, it is proposed to make the collection the nucleus of a free circulating library for the town of Columbus. There is one man in this organization. He evidently knows a good thing. Interest is centered just at present in the Fortnightly Club of Columbia, Mo. It is Columbia's only federated club and has taken upon itself to entertain the whole federation next year. Judging from the cordial invitations from the city council and curators of the state university which accompanied the Fortnightly's invitation, the club must be a factor of great influence and importance. Its members are the following ladies: Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Ayres. Mrs. Blanton, Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Ayres. They are supplemented by such allied topics as the development of Roman law, social, political and industrial conditions of Rome. Topography of Rome, Egyptian Civilization, etc.

The next meeting, December 7, will be held at the home of Mrs. Broadhead, Mrs. Marleut will lead the lesson, a comparison of Shakespeare's "Brutus" with the "Brutus" of history, Mrs. Connoway will read a paper on the subject.

The literary women of Pittsburg, Kas., have begun the second year of their flourishing club. 'The Ladles' Reading Circle.' United States history and American literature are being studied in a thorough manner. Music has a place on the programme each week. Quotations, maxims, tems of interest, questions and names of prominent places and people are given in answer to roll call, and serve to give added variety. The programme for to-morrow is as follows:

The motto is an excellent one, "Study to be what you wish to seem." The club flower is the goldenrod and the colors are red, white and blue.

Mrs. Belle Stoutenborough, ex-president of the Nebraska Federation, has two clubs under her supervision of which she is justly proud. A number of years ago twelve small boys came to her and asked her why she couldn't organize them into a club like the ones she organized for the women. She compiled with the request. The club grew in numbers and the members grew in seriousness. One of the number, who was considered a rather good-for-rothing boy, was developed, through a recognition of his talents, into an excellent artist. Now he has a national reputation. Younger boys came to Mrs. Stoutenborough to be organized into a club, and this club, too, has become a permanent institution.

The women of the far western part of the state have centered their interest in a club at Stockton. Progress is the watchword of these women, and they will not be outdone by those who are members of older and larger clubs. Only two years ago was the Twentieth Century Club organized, but it has already secured the use of the library of the academy there, has a well established reciprocity bureau, and is planning to carry out the "Restroom" idea suggested by the Federation. Both last year and this the club got out neat yearbooks showing interesting programmes. Last year one of the leading features was a study of club work all over the world. Each week the committee which had the subject in charge reported the doings of all club women as far as could be ascertained. This year the programme is miscellaneous. It is quite up-to-date in its topics—for such subjects as "Popular Books of 1838." "Do women's clubs tend to make women less companionable to men?" "How may we improve the conditions of our public schools?" "Heroes of Our War With Spain," "Child Study," and many others of live interest are outlined. Parliamentary practice is one of the special features of the year's study. The members are: Mrs. Baddwin, Mrs. Bingham, Mrs. Bradley, Mrs. Coolbaugh, Mrs. Dunaway, Mrs. Bradley, Mrs. Coolbaugh, Mrs. Dunaway, Mrs. Bradley, Mrs. Coolbaugh, Mrs. Dunaway, Mrs. Rewiey, Mrs. Buden, Mrs. Dunaway, Mrs. Kewley, Mrs. Buden, Mrs. Hememway, Mrs. Kewley, Mrs. Hawkes, Mrs. Hemenway, Mrs. Kewley, Mrs. Hawkes.

Reciprocity day at the Athenaeum last Wednesday afternoon was an unqualified success. Representatives from the fifty culture clubs of which Kansas City can boast were present to enjoy with Athenaeum members the address by Mrs. Stoutenborough, of Platismouth, Neb. Mrs. Scammon presided. Mrs. Cora Lyman opened the programme by playing Liszt's eleventh Rhapsodle. An invitation to present a paper in a symposium at the State Teachers' Association meeting was

In her speech of welcome to the guests Mrs. Scammon said that she believed the time had passed when a city federation would be beneficial. Federations in cities have seldom succeeded in promoting the friendly feeling between clubs which it is their aim to establish. Mrs. Scammon believes it would be an excellent idea for Kansas City's clubs to meet together twice a year—once during the winter in Convention hall, and once at Fairmount park in the summer. There should be one great literary attraction and the rest of the time could be devoted to discussion of club principles, sociability, etc.

In introducing Mrs. Stoutenborough Mrs. Scammon said, "She has done more than any other woman in the middle West for women's clubs."

Mrs. Stoutenborough's address was full of excellent points. She made an appeal

Mrs. Stoutenborough's address was full of excellent points. She made an appeal that touched her hearers directly for the accomplishment of the real aims of club work. She spoke of the antiquity of the "New Woman"—that much-talked-of individual having existed in Israel—and gave vidual having existed in Israel—and gave her hearers much amusement. An art department, she thinks, should be established in each club, and the art of "overlooking" studied. Sympathy, love for work, study and humanity should be the life of the club woman. She may neglect her home duttes for society but ngt for the club—she is taught better there. Clubs need not take a woman away from her church work. The club stands merely for the stimulation of mental culture. It opens the doors to those who love music and art.

the doors to those who love music and art.

After Mrs. Stoutenborough's speech Mrs. Scammon suggested a new work for the local clubs—that of supplying the school houses with suitable pictures.

Reminiscences of last week's convention were called for and in this connection Mrs. Stoutenborough said that when the country women are included in the meetings of the Missouri Federation, that organization will be head and shoulders above the Colorado Federation. In Nebraska 200 farmers' wives belong to the state federation. ion.
The uniting of the clubs in every town to the extent of providing headquarters for meetings with country women was discussed.

A social hour among the members of the various clubs was much enjoyed. Delicious refreshments were served, adding a finishing touch of sociability to the pleasure of the hour.

The Elkins Study Class will meet with Mrs. Elkins as usual next Wednesday morning. The literature and literary people, art, painters and establishing of poteries in the time of Louis XI, will be discussed conversationally. Mrs. Ada Elkins is the permanent leader. cussed conversationally. is the permanent leader.

On Wednesday, December 7, at 2:30 o'clock, Rabbi Schulman will give his lec-ture on the "Scarlet Letter" before the Athenaeum.

The home department of the Athenaeum will meet next Wednesday morning. Ladies wishing to stay to the afternoon lecture can bring lunches.

The Hon. Samuel E. Morse, ex-consul general at Paris, will address the Every Other Week Club and invited guests on next Monday evening at the Athenaeum Club rooms. The president and secretary of each club in the city have been invited. The subject of the lecture is "Characteristic Traits of French People."

The Music Study Club was especially for tunate yesterday morning in having for its soloist Mrs. Fannie Hiatt-Dutton, of Chi-cago. Mrs. Dutton's superior talent and conscientious study have made her musical recitals an opportunity for the music lover to enjoy a rare treat. Clear tones with delicate shading are the characteristic of Mrs. Dutton's playing, but it is evident that she possesses great strength as well as skill. The musicale was given at the residence of Mr. J. W. Barney.

A society has been organized within a month among the ladies of Hotel Bonaventure, which they have named the 'Columbia Club.' Their purpose is to study the nation's history. Excellent work is being done by each member. The result of the reading appears in papers, talks, and the part borne in general discussion. Roli call is answered by giving bits of information upon almost any topic—music, art, history, literature, or whatever marks the world's progress. Later the club hopes to have an occasional book review, and to introduce certain social features. Officers elected for the present term are: Mrs. C. S. Crysler, president; Miss Martha Smith, vice president: Mrs. W. E. Tenny, secretary and acting treasurer; Mrs. F. M.

Cockerell, Mrs. J. D. Flintjer, Mrs. Harvey Pitts, programme committee. The Twentieth Century Club will meet with Mrs. Hamner, 708 Olive street, No-vember 28, Lesson, third act of "Richard III."

The Open Question Club had no meeting November 22 on account of the bad weather. At the next regular meeting, December 6, the ladies will have the same programme, and will meet with Mrs. F. F. Todd, Eighteenth and Wyandotte streets. Mrs. Y. Pinkston, leader.

The Magazine Coterie will spend Mon-day afternoon with Mrs. H. L. Tomlin, %6 Olive. The topics for consideration are: "The Art Gallery," "The Green Vaults," "Museum and Porcelains of Dreslen," "The Royal Family and Palaces," "Na-tional Gallery" and "Conservatories of Borlin."

The child was then told to e-peat the story which she had told the police on the day after the murder.

"Papa and mamma were nearly all the time drunk." said the girl, "and they had sights every night and morning. One night, it was Saturday, 'cause papa was always drunk on Friday, that's how I know it was Saturday, papa told mamma to get pig's head for Sunday dinner and tripe for supper. When papa came home he found mamma had cooked the tripe and he told her he would not eat it. He said, 'I told you to get pig's head.' Mamma said, 'You per. Papa said, 'You're a liar.' Then I spoke. I said 'Papa, you told mamma to get tripe, 'cause I heard you tell her.' Papa said he didn't and he got mad at me, too. Then he tried to hit mamma with his hand and I told her to hide under the bed. She run and hid under the bed. Papa stayed in the kitchen for some time and then he tried to find mamma. He asked me where she was. I told him I didn't know, He said to me, 'You're a liar; you do know where she is.' Then he found her under the bed and he said. 'She's been there for an hour and she's afraid to come out.' He got down on his knees in the bedroom and ilt a match and looked under the bed and found her and dragged her out by the hair and while she was crying he punched her. Then he went into the kitchen and sat down on the lounge, looking over at her where he had left her.

She hadn't tried to hit him yet, but he saw her take the broom and he started to hit her again. Then she tried to put the broom up so she could hit him, but she couldn't, because he grabbed the broom away. He hit her with it, and she fell down. It was a pretty hard hit, He had the broom up over his head in his right hand, and turned it around his head and then hit mamma with it. He kind o' grunted when he hit her, because he had to twist himself to hit her hard. After she had fallen down, papa knocked at the bedroom door and told Mrs. Shehan, to come in. Mrs. Shehan came in and held mamma's head with her hand. Papa picked her up and tried to set her on the chair, but she always slid down. Mrs. Shehan said that mamma felt bad in her head, and then Mrs. Shehan and papa put her on the lounge. Mrs. Shehan went out to get some water, but she didn't come back. She kept yelling all the time, 'Your wife is dead. You killed her.' After that the policeman came around and took me and papa to the station house. Whenever papa and mamma had a fight papa often said that some day he would hang for her."

for her."

Collins took the witness stand in his Collins took the witness stand in his own defense, He practically admitted the truth of every word that his daughter had said in her statement. Then he explained that at the time he struck his wife she had hit him with the broom, and he did not mean to hit her hard. He said that when he struck his wife she fell against the bedroom door. This was the fall that had fractured her skull. He said that he never meant to harm his wife, because he thought a great deal of her. He had always considered his wife her. He had always considered his wife insane, he said. On two occasions sho

John Muir, in the December Atlantic.

In November the robins in flocks of hundreds make their way into the gardens of towns, as well as into the parks and fields and orenards about the bay of San Francisco, where many of the blessed wanderers are shot for sport and the morsel of meat on their breasts. Man then seems a beast of prey, pray as he may. Not even genuine piety can make the robinkiller quite respectable. Saturdays are the great slaughter days in the bay region. Then the city pot-hunters, good and bad, with a raging of boys, go forth to kill, kept in countenance by a sprinkling of regular sportsmen arrayed in self-conscious majesty and leggins, leading dogs and carrying hammerless, breachloading guns of famous makers.

Over the fine landscapes the killing goes forward with shameful enthusiasm. After excaping countless dangers, thousands fall, big bagfuls are gathered, many are left wounded to die slowly, no Red Cross Society to help them. Next day, Sunday, the blood and leggins vanish from the most devout of the bird butchers, and they go to church, carrying gold-headed canes instead of guns. After hymns, prayers and sermon, they go home to feast, to put God's songbirds to use, put them in their dinners instead of in their hearts, eat them, suck the pitiful little drumsticks. It is only race living on race, to be sure, but Christians singing divine love need not be driven to such straits, while wheat and apples grow, and the shops are full of dead cattle. Songbirds for food! Compared with this, to make kindling of our pianos and violins would be pious economy.

Undemocratic Government of Louisiana and Florida.

Carl Evans Boyd, in the December Atlantic In the more populous division of the Louisiana purchase, the territory of Or Louisiana purchase, the territory of Or-leans, a government modeled after that of the Northwest Territory, was organized. The constitution of the executive was the same as in the Northwest, but in the struc-ture of the other two departments there were noteworthy changes. Instead of a leg-islature composed of the governor and judges, the lawmaking power was vested in a legislative council composed of thir-teen of the most fit and discreet persons of the territory, whom the president was to teen of the most fit and discreet persons of the territory, whom the president was to appoint annually from among those holding real estate therein. With the consent of a majority of the legislative council, the governor was empowered to alter, modify or repeal any laws of the territory which were in force at the commencement of this act. . . . The territorial government of Florida was fashioned after that of the territory of Orleans. Here again we find an executive department consisting of a governor and a secretary appointed by the president, from among the citizens of the United from among the citizens of the United States residing in Florida. The ownership of real estate in the territory, which was made a requisite for membership in the legislature of Orleans, was not required for appointment to the legislature of Flor-ida. The judicial organization of Florida was almost an exact copy of that of Or-
